DESIGNER

Interior Design, Eastern Michigan University

Designing since 2013 | Joined KSI 2017

Nikki began her design career working in Higher Education while earning her degree in interior design at Eastern Michigan University. While in school, Nikki interned at the University of Michigan, working on highly technical drawings with the head architect for university housing. “What really sparked my interest in kitchen design was the multitude of millwork drawings in Auto CAD that I designed for. I acquired a true understanding of how important it is to be accurate and precise in my work.” When Nikki joined KSI she began to hone her craft in the Builder Sales department, working with a variety of builders, contractors, and some of the most experienced designers in the industry.

Today Nikki utilizes that knowledge to create beautiful and functional spaces for her clients. She is motivated by clean and classic designs that allow form and function to work as one. “My husband is a chef and I love to bake. I understand the importance of having a space that works for your family’s needs. It is my goal to help clients create a space that reflects them personally.”
